A NOTE FROM THE FOUNDER

The microbiome is a remarkable and complex part of human biology. We began with the idea that the gut microbiome could meaningfully support people during their cancer journey. After years of working with this science, we learned that interpretation is the missing piece. Our role is to provide microbiome-informed nutrition guidance, paired with the expertise of oncology-trained registered dietitians — professionals who spend years studying how food supports the body. "Food as Medicine" may be a modern phrase, but Hippocrates said it long ago: "All disease begins in the gut." Who better to guide you than a dietitian trained specifically in cancer care?

Nutrition has been overlooked for too long, yet research continues to show that preparing the body with diet and exercise can improve how treatment is tolerated. We won't claim to have everything figured out — the science is evolving, and we evolve with it. Our microbiome tools improve continuously as new data emerges. While many microbiome components show promise, harnessing them in cancer care is still early. We integrate the best available evidence to support your nutrition, keeping your gut microbes in mind. We welcome you into this journey of discovery. Our promise is simple: we will keep improving, keep learning, and pass those benefits on to you.

THE GUT MICROBIOME

Meet the trillions of helpers in your gut.

Your gut is home to trillions of tiny, mostly-helpful organisms — your microbiome. Every day they turn the food you eat into health.

The microbiome turns food into health.

During cancer care, this community can shift — influencing how you feel and how your body handles treatment.

REBIOMIX READS IT

From one simple at-home sample, RebiomiX sorts your gut into one of six groups:

- Biome Balanced
- Low SCFA Producer
- Barrier Impaired
- Low Diversity
- Overgrowth
- Inflammatory

Each gut group provides specific information to add to your dietitian report.

PUTTING IT ALL TOGETHER

We combine your gut microbiome with your current nutrition — then, using AI and your dietitian, we build a plan that's truly unique to you.

WHY IT MATTERS

Guided by evidence, built around you.

A growing body of research links what you eat to how you feel — and how well treatment is tolerated. Here's some of what it shows:

SHOWN TO Personalized nutrition during treatment can improve quality of life and treatment tolerance. (Ravasco et al.) This study showed meaningful improvements — though it did not yet use microbiome data for precision nutrition.

LINKED TO A diverse, fiber-rich diet is associated with stronger responses to immunotherapy. (Spencer et al., Science 2021) Different fibers support different microbes — and your dietitian can help you understand which matter most for you.

STUDYING Whether microbiome-guided nutrition improves these outcomes — our ongoing GLOW study. We'll follow up with you to understand how proactive, precision nutrition affects your journey.

A note on supplements: If you're on immunotherapy, check with your care team before starting any probiotic supplement.

RebiomiX is the only microbiome-informed nutrition program built specifically for cancer care, pairing at-home gut analysis with oncology-trained dietitians to deliver precision nutrition that supports treatment tolerance, immune resilience, and patient well-being.

Food first. We do not sell supplements or probiotics.
